

TEACHERS GUIDE

● Watch the film and listen to the audio snapshot.

These are great starting points to familiarise yourself with the project, and will show you what might be possible with your group.

● Explore the website.

The website and all of its varied content including oral histories, images and clippings are the best starting points for you to learn more about Irish Voices. The website is where all the content for the classroom activities will come from.

● Develop your lesson plans based on the lesson activities.

We have developed different activities for you to undertake with your group. They all offer different opportunities for discovering more about Irish Voices, as well as learning about oral history, immigration experiences, identity, marching, parades, and the history of London.

● Introduce your group to the project.

Watch the film, listen to the audio snapshot and explore our creative heritage project with your group.

● Get cracking on activities with your class or group!

Use our learning activities with your students or group to explore more about the Irish community in London, develop oral history skills and get creative.

● Document your work.

Record your oral history interviews, type up your poetry and photograph your posters, we'll add your contribution to our website!
